

— THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE —

Jill Martin

Vice President & Editor, Society Dispatches

Jill has run editorial in one form or another since 1998. For most of that time it was TrixieUpdate, the Society's daily Member newsletter — which she has since folded into Society Dispatches, the Society's outward voice across its channels. The newsletter, she'll tell you, didn't end so much as turn to face the public. She is the Executive Director's closest collaborator and the only Officer authorized to chair the Annual Brunch in Ashley's absence, which has not yet come up.

Professionally: Contributing Editor at Town & Country Magazine (Hearst), where she covers what she calls "the architecture of summer entertaining." Her column The Long Weekend has run quarterly since 2017.

Originally from Manatane, Iowa, and a graduate of Notre Dame, Jill arrived in Chicago in 1993 and has not, by her own admission, lived outside the 60614 zip code since — currently on Hampden Court. She is widely credited with shaping The Society's documentary voice.

Current Initiatives

- Society Dispatches — turning the daily record outward, onto the channels where the village now watches itself
- Town & Country Feature Coordination — developing a Lincoln Park cover package for the summer entertaining issue
- Society Editorial Standards v3 — recodifying submission and approval criteria for the Journal and the Bulletin
